Legal provisions for foreign architects

The EEC 85/384 directive governing the mutual recognition of architectural qualification was not implemented in Italy until 1992, by legal Decree n° 129 of 27 January.

This decree sets out the procedures that must be followed by architects from other countries wishing to practice in Italy.

The procedure for recognition follows the text of the directive to the letter, and is probably too complicated, in that requests for recognition of qualifications are referred to the ministry responsible for universities which, after consulting with the ministries of foreign affairs and of justice, must in turn obtain the advice of the national university council and the national council of architects, before finally adopting a recognition decree for every diploma.

Once the interministerial decree has been issued, the Order registers the architect, in its usual register if the architect in question is resident in Italy, or in a special register if temporarily practising in Italy. Architects who, at the time of the 1985 directive, had already qualified and/or were exercising their profession before the 1987/1988 academic year, have no requirement to fulfil, as their diplomas are already recognised on an interim basis by the directive itself. They simply have to apply directly to the Order. The Order and the CAN (art.10) are responsible for providing architects from other countries with information on the legislation and the deontology of the profession, and for any language training foreign architects may need in order to practice in Italy.

In Austria architects are entitled to draw up plans and design projects if they are graduates of universities where these disciplines are taught and after they have passed a state exam and have proof of three years experience working in an architect's office. Under these conditions the federal ministry of economic affairs awards the title "architect", which is indispensable to being registered with the chamber of architects and civil engineers. The title "architect" is, however only given to EU-citizens.

In Austria European Union regulations are valid. According to these rules professionals who are qualified in their own country can practice their profession in Austria. Basically two possibilities are at hand: either the architect lives in a EU-country outside Austria and offers a cross-border service, or the architect is free to settle in Austria in order to exert his/her profession. In both cases the architect is authorized to draw up plans in accordance with Austrian regulations. The division of skills and the extent of responsibilities is a matter of choice and can be appropriate to each individual case and as a function of the project. Several exemplary projects have already been implemented without any major problems.

European 5

- 1-Dietger Wissounig: Graz. New proposal for a site close to the competition site for the „OEWG“, a non-profit housing organisation. Implementation proceeds.

European 6

- 1-OFIS architects/EBA architecture: Graz. „Neue Heimat“ has offered a cooperation with the runner up project on another site. New framing conditions required a redesign and a set-up of a cooperation-platform with the city of Graz. Study completed, next step of implementation and contract is under negotiation.
- 2-POPO AG:Vienna. The architects already have finished a study commissioned by the developer in November 2001. The city wants to support a favourite implementation-climate, though a discussion about mixed use and the integration of the neighbouring sites in the project have delayed development.

Legal provisions for foreign architects

In Switzerland, laws and regulations for independent practice of the professionals differ with every canton. In french-speaking Switzerland, registration with the architects professional register is subject to several requirements (diploma equivalence with the Zürich and Lausanne federal polytechnical schools diplomas, of the Mendrisio architecture academy or the Geneva University, minimum age 25, etc.). Other regulations, especially in Alemannic Switzerland, impose different obligations or simply avoid to legislate in this field of competence.

Therefore, Switzerland follows no general regulations on the matter. While a few architects possessing a foreign diploma may have a real opportunity of practicing as free-lance professionals, there is no such a guarantee for most of them. In any case, the unrestricted practice of a free-lance profession is guaranteed by the Constitution. In most of the case, the right to compete is restricted by the rules limiting the number of foreign workers.

The winner may however join a firm established in Switzerland, acting subsequently in his name. In this instance, European Switzerland propose to support the winners by helping them to find an architect or by offering them the legal support required to make sure their cooperation evolves smoothly.

Legal provisions for foreign architects

In Sweden the title "architect" is not protected, nor is the profession. Anyone can apply for a building permit. The client is responsible for the building and has to choose a "responsible supervisor" to be on the site, who must be accepted by the local authorities. There are no legal restrictions to foreign architects exercising their profession in Sweden nor having their projects implemented. It is however common that foreign architects in this situation collaborate with a Swedish architect, for practical reasons.

Legal provisions for foreign architects

The permission and therefore the possibilities to exercise in Czech Republic are defined under the provisions of the Building Law, by the Act on Engagement of Chartered Architects, law n°360 / 1992, and on authorization of the Czech National Order of Architects. The Czech National Order of Architects delivers an authorization according to the rules aforementioned in the following fields : civil engineering, urban planning, design and landscaping, or an unspecified authorization — i.e. a general authorization in any field of activity.

If a foreign architect wishes to exercise his profession and to implement buildings in the Czech Republic, in the fields defined par the regulations, there are two possibilities : 1- To work in association with a czech architect entitled with a building authorization. In this case, there are two simples possibilities of association, as an employee of the czech architect, or by creating a joint desk by means of an association or by creating in common a legal person. The copyrights are detained by both architects. The czech authorized architect marks this common protection with his official authorization.

2- In a few cases, an exception can be made to these regulations and, under certain circumstances, a foreign architect can receive the permission to exercise his profession directly from the Order of Czech Architects.

In this case, the foreign architect must obtain a recognition of his foreign diploma and reference of his professional activity. Therefore, all the documents must be translated in czech. The cost of this translation are payable by the applicant.

If the applicant is not able to obtain a recognition of his diploma, he may ask for an exceptionnal authorization according to paragraph 8, section IV of the law n° 360/1992. The Order of Czech Architects may recognize a similar qualification and exempt the applicant of the diploma certificate, only if he passes the examination of professional qualification. This examination includes a test of knowledge and of personal practice, as far as the works submitted allow to do so, and an examination of knowledge of the czech regulations in the professional field of activity under consideration.
